

33. SIMPLE PRESENT (It causes...) VS. PRESENT CONTINUOUS (It is causing...)

Five situations where you use the simple present tense:

FUNCTION	EXAMPLES
To express routine, habit, and frequent events (that happen regularly over time) To express a fact	 Routine/Pattern: Whenever unemployment is high, the crime rate rises. Habit: Most cigarette smokers feel the urge to smoke after a meal. Frequent event: The train usually runs late on weekends due to repairs. Fact: The earth rotates on its axis once every twenty four hours.
To summarize the plot of a movie, short story, play or novel	In the movie "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," strange creatures come to earth from a distant planet. In the end, they take over the government.
To talk about an event scheduled in the future	 Registration begins at 9 a.m. tomorrow and ends at 5 p.m. the day after.
To complete a time clause	I will go to bed after I finish my homework.

Three situations where you use the present continuous tense (be + simple form + ing):

FUNCTION	EXAMPLES
To talk about something that is happening right now	 What are you doing? I am studying for a calculus test.
To talk about something taking place over a period of time in the present (extended present)	 Global population is growing at a rapid pace.
To talk about a planned event in the future.	 The committee is holding a meeting next week.

Note: Only use the present continuous with action verbs.

Using the present continuous with a state verb (e.g., know) is almost always incorrect.

Incorrect: The government is knowing the situation well.

Correct: The government knows the situation well.
